

Dear friend,

On behalf of Cure Blindness Project thank you for your recent commitment to join our Global Partners Program, a program made up of individual ophthalmologists and ophthalmological practices dedicated to helping cure treatable blindness in low- and middle-income communities throughout sub-Saharan Africa and South Asia.

Why sub-Saharan Africa and South Asia?
Because this is where help is most needed.

Globally, 43 million people are blind. A staggering number when we know that 80% of this burden is treatable or preventable. 90% of people suffering from vision loss live in low- and middle-income countries where a solution isn't available. This is where we work.

Your commitment will not only help support direct patient care but also the training of local doctors. By building local capacity and ensuring quality infrastructure and equipment are available, Cure Blindness Project (and you as a Global Partner) are helping to build sustainable systems of care. From the ground up. Let's see what's possible.

Our long-term strategy is clear. We want to help countries to build systems that address care at the primary, secondary and tertiary levels. This foundational system building takes time. It also takes resources. As a global partner, you will play a role in the success of emerging systems that will change the lives of millions of people. Millions. That's an amazing gift.

As an ophthalmologist, we know you've dedicated your career to diagnosing and treating patients to allow them to retain sight to enjoy a fuller, happier life.

As a Global Partner, you have the opportunity to help people who need it most. You have the power to change lives by restoring sight. Your generosity will be life-changing for not only patients, but their families and their communities.

With gratitude,
